DEDICATION

The Senior class of 1974 takes pleasure in dedicating the "Charger" annual to a great English teacher as well as a good friend. Her dedication to education, which we shall really appreciate during our college years; her sincerity of purpose, her calm, quiet manner and her helpful, understanding ways were always there to help us cope with our little everyday problems. So, as an act of deep appreciation, we dedicate this annual to Mrs. Sarah Burgess.

PAST DEVELOPEMENTS

February

1965
"This was the beginning"

School Almost Complete

This is the way the new entrance of Nansemond County's John Yeates High School appears today. The school is expected to be completed several months from now, but will not be occupied until September 1965. Located on Bennett's Pasture Road, near Driver, the school will replace the present Chuckatuck High School.

New John Yeates High School Brings to Mind Origin of the Name

It has taken quite a few years, but a cycle will be complete when the new John Yeates High School opens its doors to Nansemond County students in September 1965.

And it all began before the year 1731.

In September of that year—on the 18th the man whose name the new school bears, made his last will and testament and the children of the county were to be his benefactors for generations to come.

This early Philanthropist, unknown to so many inhabitants of the county today, made provisions for two free schools in the area—among the first such institutions in Virginia.

According to the will, which is on record at the county courthouse, Yeates had established the two schools (one at Driver and the other at Bellville) prior to making the will and the document merely made it possible for them to continue after his death.

So, it seems only fitting that in September of this year—234 years after Yeates made his will his name will again become synonymous, with an institution of learning for Nansemond County children.

Yeates' will is lengthy, as he made many individual bequests to relatives, church, and servants, but the bulk of the estate went to his "pet projects", the aforementioned schools.

In the first item of the will, Yeates specified that all his lands in Virginia as well as all rents and profits from the same should be converted to the use of the schools.

Further down in his bequests he leaves his books for the schools, saying that they should be kept at the respective schools "that when children have read these books they may be there for other children also."

He also mentions that the locations were chosen originally "so that one schoolhouse will be convenient for the children of the one side of Bennett's Creek, and the other on the other side thereof . . . that the most or all of the children in these parts will be educated from the Glebe (present day farm, or glebe of the Episcopal church by that name at Driver) down to the extent of that part of the parish lying on the south side of Nansemond River . . .".

The Yeates Free School system survived for many years, but the Bellville institution outlasted the one at Driver, closing in June 1921. A Miss Martha Matthews was listed at the last teacher at Bellville.

The school property was sold at public auction to E. K. Rabey for $1,175 and transferred by deed signed Nov. 28, 1923.

So, for about 44 years the county has been without a "Yeates School", but that will be all changed in September when the beautiful new and modern facility, located on the banks of the Nansemond River not far from the two originals, begins operations.

One cannot help but wonder what Mr. Yeates' reaction would be if he could see this "grand-child" of his school system today.
